Comedy 102 Roots > thanks to @sillycows - shouldn't have encouraged me dear

That Was The Week That Was (TW3) 1962 with David Frost before Mid-Atlantic
Man and Sir

November 1962, the same month that "Love Me Do" became the Beatles first hit,

Raison d'etre? "prick the pomposity of public figures"

TW3 was savage, unflinching in its devotion to highlight cant and hypocrisy seemingly fearless in its near libellous accusations and innuendos.

Prior to TW3: At the time, the BBC code banned jokes about lavatories, effeminacy in men and immorality, along with suggestive references to honeymooners, maids, fig leaves ...

Sir Hugh Greene was head of the BBC

"he gave access to anyone who was prepared to say anything morally subversive." Mary Whitehouse

Ned Sherrin was the director of TW3

Complaints poured in....so did praise

Diplomacy, n. is the art of letting somebody else have your way. Frost

For complete cast list see <http://bit.ly/Gtthl> or go to <http://www.bbc.co.uk/comedy/twtwtw/>

Highlights : gave a list of MPs who hadn't spoken in the commons in 10 / 15 years

Vote Labor and you build castles in the air. Vote Conservative and you can live in them. Frost

TW3 featured a figure, hidden in shadows, who confesses to being heterosexual and relates the misery it can cause.

Why? Mar 1962 - Ten days after being savagely beaten to a pulp in a boxing match by Emile Griffith, Benny Paret died.

The fight,not the first or last tragedy of its kind, "homophobia unleashed Griffith's fury"

Frost's scathing profile of Home Secretary Brook insinuated that his intractability in an immigration case had led to the murder of the subject.

Millicent Martin, sang with black faced minstrels about racism in the Southern States.

see "Revel with a Cause" <http://bit.ly/CrLSF>

And most memorably following President Kennedy's assassination. The whole show was given over to the subject, tackling the shock felt and the implications of the shooting with rare solemnity and dignity.

That episode was lodged at the Smithsonian Institute

The U S version proved equally groundbreaking like the British version, was no stranger to controversy.

The BBC killed TW3 in 1964

The American TW3 started in January 1964 a dozen years before Saturday Night Live

"And later this week, BBC One is to show a naked Margaret Thatcher writhing in ecstasy with Jeffrey Archer on the war cabinet table,"
